Description ↗

New Hampshire is the Granite State. The state motto is "Live Free or Die." Need more be said?

Overview of the regions Map modified from original in visitnh.gov/information/abo...

Actually though, the rock in this state comes in many forms, from the rounded boulders of *Pawtuckaway in the South to the clean fractured granite of *Cannon Cliff in the North. We even have a world class sport climbing area, though the cliffs at *Rumney are mostly schist. On the other side of the mountains, North Conway has its own scene and two of the best trad cliffs around. Cathedral and Whitehorse Ledges are just minutes from town. All of this within a state that is small enough to fit into some of your National Parks out West.

Whether you consider yourself a hard core traditionalist or a sport climbing wunderkind, there is a wealth of climbing to be found in this small state. Plus, there's some die-hard Libertarian blood around here, so don't expect to pay any taxes. And fall around these parts can be pretty close to heaven.

Description

The Barber Wall is the upper left wall of Cathedral Ledge, so named for Henry Barber and his extensive collection of first free accents on this section of the cliff. Barber was involved in the freeing of every crack from Nutcracker rightwards to Lichen Delight. All of these are classics and none are light in the grade.

This wall is one of the best places to practice crack climbing if you plan to get on the longer more committing crack climbs on the cliff. The skills you learn on these 60 to nearly 200 foot climbs (the cliff gets taller as you head to the right toward Retaliation) can even be well applied to walls like Cannon Cliff or even the big walls of Yosemite. Locals often meet here for after work sessions in the evening so it is possible to meet partners here for some cragging.

Though this area is known for its cracks there are a number of desperate sport routes and mixed (bolt/trad) climbs. In the winter, ice covers much of the cliff making for great steep ice climbing.

Getting There

To get there, climb any route on the lower left wall. Or from the top hike south along the edge of the cliff meeting a trail that wraps around to the midway ledge splitting the Lower Left and Barber Wall. You will see nutcracker first as you hike along the ledge and the routes just keep on coming till you reach the upper half of the Prow area at Upper Refuse and the Book of Solemnity. You can also find the top of Double Vee and rap in.

Description

Wow... much better than I thought it would be. Not that Youth Challenge doesn't look cool, but the second pitch is super fun. The first pitch is a strenuous good time and you should just do it. I love the position of this part of the wall--really nice exposure and view

Pitch 1: (5.10b) Start by jamming and laying back a bit of a grunt of a 5.10 crack. I've heard grades of 10b to 10d, but whatever it is, just plug some gear and hold on until the slightly slopey top out. The gear is harder to get at the crux, so plug a bit down low. Belay with gear and a single bolt.

Pitch 2: (5.10b) Again folks will argue about grades, but this seemed about right to me. Start up a hand crack on the left, then transition to the right-hand crack by way of a good foot. Protect well and make a 5.10 move up in to the sustained upper part. After the crux move, it's sustained 5.9 climbing for the most part until you meet up with Retaliation and get a little rest before that route's pumpy layback crux. Head straight up to the ledge or skirt around to the right. Belay from the ledge on gear.

Pitch 3: (5.6) Head straight up the cracks to the trees.

Location

Youth Challenge is a direct start to Retaliation with pretty much 1 and 3/4 independent pitches. Scramble up on to a ledge below the crux of that route and find the nice clean 35ft crack.

Protection

Regular rack. Some flaring crack make for tricky placements but over all it's well protected.

Daniel Ross	Sep 18, 2022 · Follow.
Austen Bernier	Sep 1, 2022 · Lead. Sustained, but the moves didn't feel that hard. Bring lots of gear for p. 2, theres a gear anchor on both ends. good pro the whole way, crux just after crack transition. DD led p 1, I led p2.
Ryan DeLena	Jun 15, 2022 · Lead / Flash. With Dylan, lead all 3 pitches, broke it up for communication. This route made me nervous for a long time, but I got on it and found it to actually be really cool. First pitch was the crux. Lots of high feet and tricky reaches for jams throughout the route. Overall I think this is a classic and im glad I can use it as a new start to Retaliation.

kylepeet	May 13, 2017 · Lead / Onsight. First pitch was burly. Traversed into Retaliation at end of left crack on 2nd pitch
Nathaniel Chu	May 13, 2017 · Fun but kinda burly grunty for sure. Traverse into retaliation is before the crack runs out.
Madeline	Jun 19, 2016 · Lead / Fall/Hung. OS the 1st pitch, one take on 2nd pitch
Joe Lee	May 16, 2016 · Lead / Onsight.
Alex Jacques	Oct 6, 2014 · brutal on hands... tape up
